If a device runs around the clock, it should use the power as sensibly as possible. With this credo, AVM brought its Fritzbox routers to market leadership. Fritzboxes can do almost everything a family or small business expects: Gigabit LAN and fast WiFi 6 including modern encryption, network shares and comprehensive remote access functions. The Fritzbox is also the workhorse that makes home school and remote office possible. Strong arguments in favor of the Fritzbox are the easy interlocking with third-party desk and cordless phones and the small computer Raspberry Pi. The technical articles by the c't editorial team in this special issue will help you select, set up and use the right Fritzbox.
